Description

Hand-knotted tribal rug, likely from the Caucasus or Persian tribal areas (border region between southern Caucasus and Luristan), woven around the 1950s-1970s. The central design features stylized trees and floral medallions, framed by richly patterned geometric borders. The weave is dense and durable, with wool pile on a cotton or coarse wool foundation. The warm colors - rust red, deep blue, ivory, and ochre - are achieved with traditional vegetable dyes and display natural variations (abrash), typical of handmade pieces. Its modest size (152 × 92 cm) makes it perfect for smaller rooms, hallways, or as a decorative wall hanging. The rug shows signs of age-appropriate wear and an old repair on the fringes, done with original warp threads. An authentic and expressive piece, ideal for rustic,
