his father Pierre Hache from the age of 16, established on his own account from 1754, appointed in 1770, following his father, cabinetmaker to the Duke of Orleans, Jean-François Hache is the heir to a dynasty of cabinetmakers which spans four generations (Noël - Thomas - Pierre) and lasts for almost 150 years old. Jean-François is certainly the most famous of all, but shares with his father and grandfather the reputation of the greatest provincial cabinetmaker, considered in fact, even more than the famous Couleru, as capable of rivaling the greatest Parisian master cabinetmakers. It is almost certain that Jean-François Hache stayed with Jean-François Oeben, the King's cabinetmaker, and the latter would probably even have visited the Hache family, very interested in their native wood veneers.
