Description

Let's talk now about the hues of this wonderful grain bag. A festival of colors that burst forth. The result of the use of highly saturated and extremely dense plant shades. The central part consisting of two wide bands is executed in Sumak technique. A technique similar to embroidery thanks to the help of a second weft thread that creates the patterns. Marvelous work and at the very least a small work of art for this everyday object that was once used for storing and transporting cereals. Hand-spun wool on wool Plant-dyed Excellent condition Circa 1880 147 x 113 cm Laurent Beauty of Kilims
