Cornelius and Heinrich Maria von Hess. His collaboration with Cornelius led him to become involved in the Nazarene movement. Also, he went to Rome in 1844 to join a group of like-minded German artists, including Heinrich Dreber, Günther Gensler and the sculptor Heinrich Gerhardt. He returned to Hamburg in 1848, where he focused on genre and history painting. In 1855, he moved to Düsseldorf to work under the renowned genre artist Rudolf Jordan, and became associated with the Düsseldorf School of Painting. Since then, he has devoted himself exclusively to genre works. Many scenes from children's lives are depicted, reflecting his wife Emma's profession as a teacher. Later, she founded her own school for girls, the "Schuback'schen Schule." The school was open until 1911. Schuback was also a member of the Malkasten artists' association and the Düsseldorf artists' association. In 1885, he made another extended stay in Rome. A major retrospective was held at the Kunsthalle Düsseldorf shortly after his death. Shipping to France and internationally.
