Description

A refined Rococo console table, superbly representing the craftsmanship of mid-18th century French cabinetmakers. The giltwood structure is exuberantly carved with rocailles, acanthus leaves and floral scrolls, arranged in a dynamic and asymmetrical composition. The elegantly curved legs are joined by a central stretcher adorned with pierced and intertwined volutes. The serpentine-shaped top is made of fine veined alabaster, enhancing the luxurious appeal of the piece. A work of noble commission, likely conceived for an aristocratic residence or a Parisian hôtel particulier.
