He is listed among the painters active in Montmartre at the beginning of the 20th century where he lived in the 1930s at 133 rue de Clignancourt. He took the painting course of Paul-Albert Laurens (1870-1934), eldest son of Jean-Paul Laurens (1838-1921), who trained first-rate painters, notably at the Académie Julian.Henri Poey exhibited for the first time at the Salon of 1934 a work entitled Le Printemps. It is a rural scene comprising several characters and whose "drawing is particularly remarkable"*. He has
