Description

Chandelier necklace probably dating from the 1950s, in 375/°° rose gold (9 KT, clover hallmark) adorned with a cascade of coral drops in a rich and luminous orange-red color... From a choker base made up of a line of button-shaped coral, a characteristic shape in this material, superb drops are suspended in gradients. The gradient and the tapered shape of these drops give this jewel its femininity. In its center, a larger oval cabochon and a large pear are bezel-set, which gives this jewel preciousness and rarity. The mobility of all the tassels ensures a visual lightness, although this necklace is opulent and covering...in a beautiful balance of volumes and shapes. The gold title is particularly suitable and represents a wise choice in the context of any mobile assembly in tassels, by its particularly good resistance... This necklace is equipped with an aesthetic and discreet spring ring clasp while its chain is punctuated with a reminder of coral in the form of delicate pearls. Total length of the necklace: 45 cm (possible modification to be studied by our workshop) Gross weight: 17.33 g Condition: tiny micro-scratches; imperceptible natural areas in the coral, a lack of material barely visible to the naked eye in the central pear, due to its very large size (see photos). These various manifestations on the coral are natural witnesses and guarantee of its authenticity. Possibility of payment entirely remotely via the site.
