Description

A refined pair of Art Nouveau porcelain vases, dating to circa 1895. Produced using high-quality porcelain blanks from Rudolstadt (Thuringia, Germany) and decorated in Vienna by the workshop of Ernst Wahlliss -- a renowned Austrian designer of the Belle Époque. This collaboration was part of a documented export practice, combining German technical excellence with Viennese decorative sophistication.

Each vase is finished in deep cobalt blue and richly enhanced with gold scrollwork and applied details. The shape, surface treatment, and artistic flair are fully in line with Wahlliss' luxury production aimed at international clientele.

Underside marked with the blue underglaze "Drei Gewehre" (Three Rifles) of Rudolstadt, together with the phrase "Manufactured in Austria" - a designation used for export, as Austrian porcelain held high prestige at the time.

The presence of such mark indicates that the vases were produced exactly for the American market, as such export markings were commonly used to comply with U.S. import regulations.
