Bracelet in 750/°° white gold (18 KT, owl hallmark), adorned with brilliant-cut diamonds all around its perimeter. This one has a square section, because the diamonds are set with prongs. In this way, in reality, we only see the diamonds of the bracelet when worn, and the edge only reveals the finely crafted work of the prongs. This bracelet is the counterpart of the flexible "line" or "tennis" bracelets, in a rarer rigid version. It offers an even more contemporary aesthetic of this sober and timeless jewel. Generally oval in shape, it fits the shape of the wrist. This is made possible by the arrangement of a hinge to ensure its opening. It closes with a "ratchet" clasp that is completely invisible once adjusted, and has two additional safety features on the edge: in the form of a
