Description

Bronze and memory.Proud, poised, timeless: this Renaissance-style knight in patinated bronze -- signed Macola Venezia -- is a remarkable expression of the historicist and commemorative taste that shaped Italian decorative arts in the mid-19th century.Inspired by the great equestrian monuments of the Renaissance, from Donatello's Gattamelata to Verrocchio's Colleoni, the figure impresses with its powerful composition and refined detailing: engraved armor, ornate tack, curled mane, and monumental stance.Cast between 1840 and 1860 and mounted on an elegant base of Alpine green marble, this sculpture reflects the craftsmanship of pre-unification Venetian workshops, capable of reinterpreting the past with erudition and artisanal excellence.
