Description

Tank ring from the 1940s in 750/°° rose and white gold (18 KT, owl hallmark). It offers a beautiful asymmetrical volume with a growing movement, the volume of which is perfectly balanced by two gadroons, one in white gold, paved with old-cut and rose-cut diamonds, the other in rose gold paved with synthetic rubies in baguettes. The synthetic stones correspond to this period, during which jewelers used them due to the lack of availability of natural stones...they therefore contribute to the authenticity of the ring. These baguettes echo the rectilinear arrangement of the ring itself. This is therefore, as a whole, very representative of its time: beautiful volume, use of pink and white gold, old-cut diamonds and calibrated rubies....And above all, by its design, this ring presents a very structured, balanced and
