Description

Antoni Tàpies is considered one of the most significant Spanish artists of the 20th century and is one of the leading exponents of the European Informal movement. His work combines matter, signs and symbols, often with a strong spiritual and political value. He used poor materials (sand, marble dust, paper, cloth) and graphic signs to create dense, evocative and tactile surfaces.
The main subject is a depiction of a shirt, made with the etching, aquatint and carborundum printing technique: a technique that is used to create a relief matrix that, through pressure, transfers the ink onto the paper, producing an image with particular textures and tones. The lower part of the graphic, on the other hand, is characterised by more dynamic elements, typical of his style.
