Description

The "A L'Espérance" mantelpiece, designed by Henri Godchot, is an exceptional piece dating from the late 19th century. Made in Paris, at 31 & 31bis Boulevard Saint-Martin, it embodies the craftsmanship and refined aesthetics of this period. The set consists of a marble clock, finely decorated with antique bronze scenes, recalling the classical and mythological inspirations dear to the time. The clock's balance, weighted with mercury encapsulated in sealed tubes, demonstrates remarkable technical mastery aimed at ensuring optimal horological precision. Accompanying the clock, two chalice-shaped cassolettes, also made of bronze, complete this set. Their delicate decoration of putti, these mischievous little cherubs, brings a romantic and poetic touch to the ensemble. This work is a
