Description

Beautiful series of 4 white earthenware tiles, particularly neat, to compose the pretty ember vegetable gardens or stoves of our region of Languedoc. Each of these tiles of 12.5cm x 12.5cm x 0.8cm approximately, is decorated in high fire blue and manganese with a character, sheltered from sun under a large hat, pretty landscapes in a circle whose spandrels are painted with "Fleurs de Lys". Use of muted blue, perhaps involuntary, like a surface wash is superb. Probably made by Jacques Ollivier, before 1750, beautiful hand-made; (I found this information in: Montpellier earthenware between the Middle Ages and the modern era: written sources, collections and archaeology.
