Description

Rug from present-day northwest Turkey, wool, wool warp and weft, circa 1950. Good overall condition. Small old restorations in the border. Regular wear and beautiful patina on the entire rug. The stopping points have been restored in our workshop. The city of Kars is located in ancient Eastern Armenia where a large Armenian community made rugs and kilims. In the 9th and 10th centuries, it was an important city in the Kingdom of Armenia. The region of Yerevan and Kars is credited with the 'dragon rugs'. The patterns are similar to those of Caucasian rugs from Armenia and Georgia. The weaving tradition is ancient. The rugs are most often woven and knotted by Armenians, in small workshops or at home. Kars rugs are called 'Turkish Kazak' or 'Kazak Kars'. This rug features
