French Porcelain Figures Of Musicians, Bloch & Sie, Paris, C. 1887-1900

550 EUR

Signature : Bloch & Sie

Period : 19th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Porcelain

Description

A rare and finely modelled pair of antique French porcelain musician figures, produced in Paris by Bloch & Sie (later known as Bourdois & Bloch) between 1887 and 1900. Each figure stands on a Rococo-style base with moulded scrollwork and floral elements, hand-painted with gilt highlights.

The male figure carries a drum (one stick missing, the other broken), while the female figure is posed beside a harp with replaced strings. Both faces are delicately painted with expressive features, and the overall execution is typical of the high standards associated with the Parisian porcelain revival of the late 19th century.

Bloch & Sie were leading makers of Rococo revival porcelain during the Belle Époque, producing decorative works that combined 18th-century stylistic influence with late 19th-century craftsmanship. Their pieces are now considered collectible representations of post-Sèvres French porcelain.

The male figure bears the underglaze blue crossed-line mark on the reverse, while the female figure is marked underneath the base - the registered factory mark of Bloch & Sie, Paris. From a gentleman's collection.

Condition: one drumstick missing, the other broken; replaced harp strings; minor flower losses. No restorations. Overall excellent antique condition.

Dimensions: Male - height 27 cm, weight 991 g
Female - height 27 cm, weight 621 g
