Description

Boldness and modern contrast for this Louis XIII period armchair, a beautiful antique example with marked decorative elements, notably the twisted wooden legs and armrests. The revisited seat and backrest fabric is very original: a colorful tropical print with a tiger in the center, a modern contrast to the classic wooden structure. We also notice finely carved animal heads on the armrests, captivating where the old and the contemporary intertwine. Its carved wood, with its twisted legs in a baroque or Louis XIII style, orchestrates an enigmatic and noble presence. The velvet fabric is a true mosaic of colors that transcends the object into a reimagined, almost theatrical work.
