Description

Large and beautiful 18th century painting in an elongated shape at the top of a door or trumeau. This beautiful painting alone represents all the charm and poetry of the Age of Enlightenment under the reign of Louis XV. On a beautiful stretcher and relined, cleaned and presented in its original period gilt frame with a pearly edge, gilded with gold leaf and a period patina. This well-animated canvas brings together four groups of characters evolving near the fountain in a park, with a beautiful bright view in the distance, painted with great delicacy this pretty and decorative canvas has everything to seduce, a gallant subject in the central main characters of a young man with a fruit basket preparing to make an offering to the beautiful Marquise, while on his left a more enterprising man courts his beauty under the amused eye of a spectator, at their feet a lady-in-waiting seems challenged, on the left another couple who are counting flowers and on the right in the foreground another couple in conversation sitting on the grass, like the three characters in the distance a village closing the scene... Everything is there in this beautiful universe of voluptuousness and carelessness... A beautiful large painting not devoid of charm in good condition
