Description: Charming Liberty-style sculpture in graniglia from the 1930s, depicting a dancing putto playing a Pan flute. The figure stands in a graceful and dynamic pose, with one leg raised and the body forming a gentle spiral movement, characteristic of the Art Nouveau aesthetic, full of elegance and lightness. The subject - a young satyr or pastoral putto - is sculpted with lively expression and fine attention to detail: the curly hair, the floral decoration at the waist, and the bark texture of the tree trunk all contribute to its appeal. Time has added a natural patina, enhancing its antique charm. Perfect as a garden
