Description

Add a unique statement piece to your interior with this exceptional pair of Stigram floor lamps, a rare and iconic model designed by Jean Pierre Vitrac. Created in the 1970s, these lamps reflect Vitrac's singular approach--an artist and designer renowned for blending geometric rigor, bold graphic language, and visual poetry.

Jean Pierre Vitrac, a discreet yet influential figure in late 20th-century French design, made his mark through sculptural creations that elevate furniture to the realm of art. Trained in the fine arts and influenced by modernist and post-industrial movements, Vitrac developed a distinctive aesthetic vocabulary that combines functionality with strong visual presence. His works, often produced in limited editions or custom commissions, are characterized by structured minimalism, precise use of color, and a desire to break from conventional decorative norms.

The Stigram model perfectly embodies this spirit.

Featuring a slender black metal frame, each lamp is topped with a cylindrical white acrylic shade encircled by a vivid red horizontal band. This bold color contrast--black, white, red--evokes both Constructivist principles and the understated elegance of 1970s-80s French design. The overall silhouette, at once simple and architectural, gives these floor lamps a striking sculptural presence, while maintaining excellent everyday functionality.

Today, pieces stamped Vitrac are extremely difficult to find on the vintage design market. Their rarity stems from the limited and often bespoke nature of their production, along with growing collector interest in bold, characterful works. Matching pairs, in particular, are nearly impossible to come by--making this offering all the more special.

This pair of Stigram floor lamps will appeal to discerning collectors and interior designers alike, seeking pieces that are decorative, sculptural, and timeless. A rare opportunity to acquire an authentic, signed pair that brings bold elegance and design heritage into any contemporary or mid-century space.
