Description
-------------

Presented in its beautiful gilded frame with a wide cornice, an amusing scene of monks receiving the arrival of the caravan of donkeys laden with provisions. At the gate of the monastery, in the alley of a row of aligned trees, curious monks welcome the arrival of the provisions at the foot of the stall with the coat of arms on the forecourt of the vault, not without interest; a donkey rears up, causing the black dog to run out to fall, panicking. A serene monk, eyes to the sky, unloads the provisions eagerly awaited from his mount, while many others rush to welcome this happy happiness. There is a lot of humor in this funny scene and the fine touch of the painting gives all the detail to this amusing painting, the subject and the quality of this smoothed painting from the middle of the 19th
