Description

Elegant pair of carved and silvered wooden frames, made in the Emilia region during the first half of the 18th century. The simple profile, with a smooth inner edge and rounded inner molding, is fully covered in silver leaf, with signs of oxidation and a beautiful aged patina. They were likely originally finished with a mecca (gilt-silver) effect. The frames underwent a restoration some years ago, but would benefit from further conservation. The wood used, most likely limewood, is consistent with 18th-century craftsmanship. Both frames retain their original hanging hooks. On the back, traces of former fixings suggest the original presence of applied carved elements on all sides--perhaps frontons or decorative additions that are now lost. The frames are nearly identical in size, with only minimal
