works of art between 1880 and 1910. (The term "Hadji" applies to the Muslim who made a pilgrimage to Mecca) the "Hadji Jalili" are emblematic Tabriz always knotted with the finest wools or silks. Our model has unusual shades, chocolate, milk chocolate, gray, wolf and ivory. A large, skillfully cut mandorla sown with fine little wolf bouquets on a cream, ivory background is placed in the center of the field. It releases these bouquets of stylized flowers placed in a peacock's tail, representing the tree of life, surrounded by abundantly flowered branches matching the wolf and ivory dyes. # A vase or vases in the center of the carpet represent the ancient attribute of the Sumerian goddess of water in the third millennium. A vase from which water springs, the motif has remained until today, in oriental art, but it has lost its original meaning. A group of Persian antique carpets of the most extraordinary is that of the carpets called "with the vase". The vase is a pretext for an overflow, a floral gushing, in arabesques with volutes. The vase associated with the tree of life, is found on Persian types: Tabriz, Kashan, Macchad. But also on Turkish interpretations, in Ottoman carpets and marvelous silks of Kashmir. Over the centuries, the decor has moved away from the original decor. The field with flowers on a discreet Herati decoration in the background. The decoration of the field is mainly composed of stylized flowers accompanied by small pendants in the shape of a halberd. The medallion cut with four points is surrounded by an ivory-colored border accentuating the contrast between the field which supports it. A rare carpet by its colors and its decoration. Four small stepped spandrels delimit the angles. The wide border with garlands of flowers is composed of six braids. The border, richly flowered, testifies, like the whole of this piece, to the mastery of the craftsman who knotted it. This piece contains many elements of ancient decoration which are almost no longer found today. Sublime artifact of the Persian culture of the 19th century knotted under the
