Description

Very beautiful earthenware terrine or soup tureen with a very delicate low-fire decoration. This earthenware bears the monogram signature of the widow Perrin's factory in Marseille, despite the quality of the very finely crafted decoration I think that it is perhaps a late piece which borrows the signature of the famous factory but which seems to be "in the style". (Note that the last photo I have attached shows what appear to be "hairs" on the reverse of the lid, but they are nothing of the sort; they are simply tiny cracks in the glaze that do not appear on the obverse; the earthenware actually sounds very good).
