Description

Majestic Empire period ewer in sterling silver of the first title (950%). It is very gracefully decorated with a period engraving which takes up the decorative elements of the lid (Swan). The handle is particularly beautiful with its cast silver attachment representing the god Mercury and Cupid's quiver filled with reed stems from which two snakes escape which connect the handle to the body of the ewer closed by a lid topped with a swan which serves as a fretel. It is in an impeccable state of conservation and weighs approximately 800 grams.
