Description

Japanese golden carp in lacquered wood from the Zo Hiko house in Kyoto, Japan, 1920s. In Japan, the koi carp has multiple meanings. This emblematic fish represents bravery, perseverance, courage, and love. As a result, it occupies an important place in the art of Japanese tattooing. This symbol is highly valued in Japanese culture. A cultural heritage, the koi carp is a source of great pride in the archipelago, particularly in the village of Yamakoshi, its birthplace. It also appears in Japanese prints and paintings by the great masters, as it is so adored.
