Description

- Pair of 6-light gilt bronze candelabra, 19th century Louis-Philippe period (1830-1848). - Triangular base with concave sides decorated with heart-shaped rays, supporting a tripod with folded lion's paws on which rest acanthus leaves alternating with scrolled shells arranged between the legs like lambrequins. Turned shaft fluted in sheath, with a base decorated with water leaves then large vertical backed leaves, supporting a bouquet of six lights. The central stem exceeding all the others stands and has two levels of leaf bases carrying a socket decorated with a frieze of backed water leaves while the five branches arranged around evolve in an S shape with leaf and inverted volute. They end with the same decorated socket. - These candelabras are distinguished by the finesse of their chiseling and
