Description

This elegant Dogon statue, carved from a single block of wood, presents a slender and stylized silhouette. The long, slender neck supports a head with refined features: a rounded forehead, a straight nose, and discreet lips. The arms are pressed against the body, the legs slightly bent, in an attitude of calm and contemplation. On the head, a spherical element evokes wisdom or transmission. The visible tool marks and the natural patina reinforce the authenticity of the work. These sculptures accompanied rituals linked to fertility, protection, or ancestry.
