Description

Pair of Empire ormolu candlesticks, early 19th century production circa 1810.

The model is known and identified as a Ravrio production. Ravrio is one of the most talented bronze makers in early 19th century, together with Claude Galle and Thomire - he was supplier to Emperor Napoleon. Beautiful sober and finely chiseled decoration, ideal to complete an Empire collection with a model of "Imperial quality" (Ravrio's candlesticks with a very close pattern are exhibited at Fontainebleau Palace) . They are in good condition, no lack, no deformation, worn original gilding, a small lack under the base of one of the two candlesticks. Height: 28.5cm Base diameter: 13cm
