and decorative arts in Paris. He was encouraged by his teachers Maurice Brianchon, Jean Dupas, Raymond Legueult, Roland Oudot, and Roger Bissière. A prisoner of war for five years in Germany during World War II, he returned to Lorient in 1949 where he became a drawing teacher until his retirement in 1976. His painting is inspired by naive art and poetic reality, as well as expressionism, non-figurative, lyrical and geometric abstraction. Living in Guidel, he died on January 8, 1995 in Lorient. In 1939, he received commissions and sold works to the State. Paris, National Museum of Modern Art. Museums in Belgrade, Glasgow, Vannes, Pont-Aven, Ernée.
