Description

HAUTE EPOQUEVery nice bronze mortar, complete, with its pestle, Netherlands 17th century. The mortar is tiered in 3 registers, separated by friezes of triple raised rings: * Patronymic and dated on its upper frieze: ANTHOINE BERNERD 1640. The patronymic of the mortar's commissioner and its typology correspond to a Dutch (or German) origin. * The middle register features 4 rectangular relief reserves with grotesque heads surrounded by a vegetal register. * The lower register is naked, without any decoration. Dimensions: 13 cm diameter and 8.5 cm height for the mortar. 20.5 cm length for the pestle . The pestle is indeed its own (which remains relatively rare) as its proportions and adaptation to the pestle's using seem to attest, and a very beautiful patina similar to both elements, light brown with silver reflections. The mortar has a slight chip on its edge (see photos) that does not detract from its overall appearance. Traces of impacts attest to its frequent/daily and prolonged use over centuries.
