Description

This Ruscha dish is an excellent example of modern ceramics from the 1950s and 1960s, a characteristic feature of German ceramics from this era. The Ruscha brand is known for its bold designs and vibrant colors, often paired with organic shapes and abstract patterns, as is the case here. The dish features a graphic design, with sinuous lines and gentle curves that seem to unfold around the center of the dish. The dominant colors are a deep green, black, and white, which combine to create a fluid, almost hypnotic texture, enhanced by the presence of touches of yellow that add a vivid and bright contrast to the overall pattern. Ruscha is a German ceramics brand founded in 1922 in Hohenberg an der Eger, Germany, by the Ruscha Porzellanfabrik ceramics workshop. The brand
