architectural rigor, enlivened by sharp contrasts in the lighting effects and showing in the modulations of gray a fine sensitivity. In addition to his numerous landscapes of Algeria, he also became known as a military portraitist, painting uniforms with precision, and naturally became official painter to the Ministry of War, where he collaborated with Alexandre Cabanel. He was also the author of church decorations, including that of Villemomble (Martyrdom of Saint Laurent, 1857). Brun became a member of the Artistes Français in 1883.
