2 000 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Oil painting

Width : 117

Height : 92

Description

The painting depicts a highly evocative classical landscape, likely a view of Tivoli. In the foreground, several human figures are visible immersed in nature: on the left, a woman with a child walks along a path, while on the right, a couple with a small dog are engaged in conversation near the entrance to a cave. The scene is surrounded by majestic trees and imposing rocks, which draw the viewer's gaze to a backdrop of rolling hills and an ancient ruined village. The artist uses atmospheric perspective, a painting technique that creates depth by blending colors into the background, creating a realistic and engaging effect. The lush nature and the human presence, harmoniously integrated into the natural context, suggest an ideal balance between man and landscape. A Roman work from the first
