Description

Dallah ??? in embossed brass for the lid and engraved brass with a burin for the body. Decorated with stylized flowers and a small medallion engraved with a signature. The lid receives a prominent fretel, the bronze handle ends at the end with a beautiful mustache attachment. This type of very particular large pouring spout is present in the Persian Gulf and in Central Asia, we have the advantage of finding it complete. The whole in very good condition, from the 19th century, early 20th century and of splendid quality, a beautiful object, a beautiful patina. ## The last photo shows a large Dallah which is on the first page of our Proantic gallery.# A dallah (in Arabic: ???) is a traditional Arabic coffee pot used for centuries to prepare and serve qahwa (gahwa). Qahwa is an Arabic
