Description

The painting depicts a gallant outdoor scene, typical of 18th-century Rococo painting. This refined work depicts a group of noblemen and ladies immersed in pleasant conversation amidst idealized nature. The scene, rich in detail and pastel colors, expresses the elegance typical of Rococo art. The brushstrokes are light, with interplays of light and shadow that lend depth and realism to the draperies and faces. The landscape in the background is rendered in soft tones, contributing to an overall effect of grace and serenity. A certain French influence is evident in the style, with references to Jean-Antoine Watteau and a taste for "fêtes galantes." 110x91 cm with frame 85x67 cm
