Description

Elegant pair of small, two-light wall sconces, made of finely chiseled and gilded bronze, adorned with delicate white porcelain flowers. The central stem is shaped like a flared, openwork fluted vase, ending in a base finely carved with acanthus leaves and rocaille motifs. The upper border of this "vase" features a large leafy crown from which two sinuous light arms emerge, shaped like leafy branches, blooming with small white porcelain flowers. At their ends, bobeche-shaped flower sockets are topped by narrow flower sockets. In the center of the vase, a third branch reaches toward the sky, carrying a multitude of small white porcelain flowers, probably from Saxony or Paris, modeled and enameled with great care. These flowers, of various shapes, some with touches of pink or
