Description

Large wrought iron lamp in the style of the Ateliers Marolles 1950s. The Ateliers de Marolles were founded in the 1940s in the village of Marolles-en-Brie (Seine-et-Marne) by Jean Touret, sculptor and artistic ironworker. Bringing together a community of artisans--ironworkers, cabinetmakers, and ceramists--the workshops produce unique furniture, halfway between folk art and sacred art. Each piece, often made of solid oak and wrought iron, is marked by a rustic expressiveness, a noble simplicity, and a deep attachment to raw materials. The spirit of the Ateliers de Marolles rejects industrial production in favor of manual, community-based, and poetic work. Today, the works from these workshops are highly prized by lovers of design and spiritual or sculptural furniture, particularly in collections of
