Description

Magnificent and rare Louis XIV period cartel clock in rosewood and Boule marquetry. This cartel is complete with its very richly worked lamp base. Marquetry of brown tortoiseshell and brass forming a network of interlacing and foliage. Very rich ornamentation of gilded bronzes in applique. Under the dial two women and a cupid in bronze cut out symbolizing abundance and the arts. At the top, renowned angel playing the trumpet. The period clock movement works perfectly, it strikes the hours and half hours. It is signed Masson in Paris, a watchmaking dynasty from the 18th century. Only the tongue and the balance seem to have been changed. Overall in very good house condition, with some small losses and scratches normal for an object over 300 years old. This
