Description

A magnificent copy of a Neoclassical console table crafted in the late 18th century and the first year of the Ottoman Empire, set amidst the astronomical nature of marbles of various origins. The sober, geometric architectural design reflects the canons of Neoclassical taste, and the careful selection of materials and their chromatic arrangement reveal extraordinary craftsmanship. This console table features a tapered truncated pyramid, elegantly riveted in Alpine green marble, intersected by golden wood profiles, accentuating the verticality of the structure. The upper section, rectangular and full-bodied, rests on a decorative band with geometric motifs in antique pink marble and brecciated marble inlays, carefully designed to create a refined alternation of color and texture,
