Description

- Louis XVI style four-leaf folding screen in carved and mahogany-stained beech. 20th century work. - This two-sided folding screen is composed of four beech leaves whose frames are delicately carved with a frieze of heart-shaped rays. Equipped with hinges along their entire height, the leaves can be arranged with great freedom, thus offering multiple furnishing possibilities. - The four leaves are, in the lower part, covered with a stretched fabric in orange tones which elegantly matches the warm mahogany color of the wood. This fabric is adorned with matching passementerie, a golden yellow braid which underlines its outline. - The upper parts are glazed, imitating glass, thus ensuring that natural light does not diminish. The smoky tint of these panes offers a successful
