Description

BREZ (Jaques) - The flora of insectophiles. Preceded by a Discourse on the usefulness of insects and the study of insectology. Utrecht, Chez B. Wild et J. Altheer, 1791; in-8, XXVIII-324 pp., paperback, waiting cover. Uncut work. Good condition. The work is composed of two distinct parts, the first on the usefulness of insects, where the author gathers observations on both the harmfulness of certain insects and their usefulness; numerous additional notes contain curious anecdotes. The second part lists the various plants forming the insectological flora, or the plants that serve as food and habitat for insects.
