Description

Wooden replica of the work "Madame Récamier de David" after René Magritte, Wooden coffin 1970's In his work "Madame Récamier de David", René Magritte diverts the famous neoclassical portrait of Jacques-Louis David by replacing the reclining figure with an empty wooden sarcophagus. This surrealist gesture, both ironic and enigmatic, questions absence, memory and representation. By replacing the body with an inert object, Magritte plays on the viewer's expectation and the power of images. This work is now kept at the Centre Pompidou in Paris.
