Description

A rare pair of antique Rozenburg Den Haag Art Nouveau vases, each of identical flared cylindrical form on a square base, finely hand-painted in polychrome with stylised birds among blossoming flowers and foliage. Both are finished with Rozenburg's signature transparent "eggshell" glaze. Rozenburg achieved international recognition at the Paris Exposition of 1900, where their revolutionary eggshell earthenware was praised for its technical and artistic innovation. The vases on offer are marked to the base with the Rozenburg Den Haag factory stamp (crown and stork), along with consecutive numbers (276, 298) denoting their sequence in a limited series, and decorators' marks. Most likely the vases designed by company artist Willem Hartgring, renowned for his bird motifs. Vases of
