Description

Depiction of a tiger moving across flat, rocky ground. Clearly crouching, it advances with soft steps on its supple legs. Its low belly rubs against the surface of the rock. Its piercing gaze is directed towards a distant point. Here we see the tension that accompanies the animal during the hunt. Signature: L. Bureau Léon Bureau (1866-1907) - French sculptor specializing in animal representations. He was particularly fond of wild animals, such as birds of prey, hunting felines, and spirited horses. His work consists mainly of cabinet bronze sculptures. France, 19th century. Patinated bronze, stone. Dimensions: 15 cm x 45 cm x 10 cm. Condition: good.
