Description

Antique Signed 19th-Century Bronze Medieval Knight by Louis-François-Frémiet This striking bronze sculpture portrays a medieval knight in full regalia, arms extended in a dramatic and assertive stance. The figure is rendered with exceptional detail, from the textured chainmail and flowing cloak to the heraldic shield and helmet. The knight stands atop a circular base made of rich, reddish-brown marble, which not only enhances the visual impact but also anchors the piece with elegance and weight. Most notably, the base bears the engraved signature "Fremet," identifying the artist as Louis-François-Frémiet, a renowned 19th-century French sculptor celebrated for his historical and equestrian works. Frémiet's involvement elevates this sculpture beyond mere decoration--it becomes a collectible artifact of fine art. Known for his meticulous realism and dynamic compositions, Frémiet's works often explore themes of heroism and mythology. This knight, with its commanding presence and historical authenticity, exemplifies his style and would appeal to collectors of academic sculpture, military history, or French Romantic art. It's a piece that not only tells a story but also carries the legacy of a master sculptor.
