Description
-------------

Oil on canvas of quality representing a female nude. The composition is interesting, the almond green background with a light dominance is present on three quarters of the painting, only the upper quarter is darker and it is partially gilded with leaf a little in the taste of Klimt, which attracts the eye. The female nude is treated with a beautiful degree of realism, the trompe l'oeil is successful. The frame is original. This work is signed and dated lower right: "Forestier 21" (for 1921). Note: this painting is in very good general condition. It is worth noting tiny deformations of the canvas at the bottom, near the edge of the frame and very small transparent drops on the fabric near the foot (perhaps studio projections), all of these reports do not hinder the reading of the work. Please look at the photos carefully.
