"Between tradition and brilliance: Bordry makes Impressionism shine "Faithful among the faithful of the Rouen School, the late Albert MALET, an outstanding teacher, trained many artists in this noble Impressionist movement. Among them, Jean-Pierre BORDRY, a friend of MALET, naturally embraced the heritage of this school - as much by the delicacy of his palette as by the finesse of his gesture and the refinement of his compositions. BORDRY knew how to bring out a quivering divided touch, animated by a fluid and assertive palette, whose singular vibration subtly combines charm and emotion. The brilliant seasons, the skies imbued with mist typical of the Normandy alleys, the changing reflections of a veiled sun... all this composes a vibrant and sensitive work in his work, acclaimed by faithful lovers of Impressionism. But his gaze is not limited to Normandy alone: lively beaches, harmonious shores, landscapes bathed in light - whether Savoyard, Breton or Provençal - equally nourish his inspiration, as they offer this unique alchemy between space, sensation and light which so well characterizes his universe.
