Description

Rare muzzle for truffle pig in wrought iron, composed of a collar armed with three teeth and a projection completed by a stirrup forming a spring. With chains for leash. Gers, 19th century.

H: 29 cm. W: 43 cm. Sows alone are used for truffle hunting, their sense of smell being sharper than that of males. But the inconvenience with the pig is that it loves to eat truffles. Also, to prevent it, it is necessary to keep it on a leash or muzzle it.
