Description

Portrait as well as a nude, this singular painting, created around 1920 in the wake of the "New Objectivity", is by the Swedish painter Erik Detthow. Magnetic composition with a stylized drawing of the slender and delicate body of a young woman staring at the viewer with an innocent air, a small bouquet held or offered in one hand and the other placed on her heart. This young redhead with her luminescent body could be a representation of reality or a symbolic apparition. Erik Detthow was a Swedish painter born on February 27, 1888 in Vänersborg and died on December 25, 1952 in Stockholm. A student at the Stockholm School of Fine Arts, he painted nudes and landscapes animated by country life. He participated several times in the Salon des Tuileries. In April-May 1929 he
